BEHOLD, the second edition of "LEST WE FORGET" makes its appearance. May it meet with your approval and serve as a pleasant reminder of those "good old college days."

College days, like wine, grow better as they grow older. The little misunderstandings with the faculty, the way you were treated on the examinations, your failure to get an invitation to Eve Lovelace's Hall, etc., lose all their acidity after a lapse of years and then is the need for a little volume to recall to you the joys of college life.

You can only imagine how much your college spirit will be increased by the possession of two copies. We may be able to furnish you with an additional copy. "Avoid the Rush."

¶ You will no doubt naturally inquire how it is that the "LEST WE FORGET" being an Annual, the first copy was published in 1904 and the second in 1906. We reply by asking you to work out that little problem for yourselves. To begin with we suggest that you try to recall the time you sent in your subscription for a copy of the 1905 edition.

¶ In closing let us urge that you continue to lend your assistance to LEST WE FORGET in making it an increasing honor for our Alma Mater.

Senior Class Poem.

Good-Bye.

Soon college days will be o'er,
And friends long loved will part
Some leave to return no more
To the place so dear to our heart.

How sad will be the good-byes,
When the parting day shall come.
We'll wipe our tear-stained eyes,
As we separate one by one.

So many dear hallowed places,
Where we talked of fame and life,
To friends whose happy faces
Did lighten our work and strife.

To my comrades all, good-bye,
May we meet again sometime,
And converse of the days gone by,
When Peace our hearts enshrine.

JUNIOR HISTORY.

T IS with pride that we undertake to write the history of a class whose record is so eminent. Since the memorable day when we, as Freshmen, met and elected our first President, we have felt our importance and have made a "dash" in all the enterprises of 'varsity life.

In the fall of the year 1903 there assembled in the chapel of the University a body of twenty-five very "fresh" students, but mind you they were not destined to remain so. Although we had to undergo the usual trials, mockeries, applauses, etc., which are unavoidable in the Freshman year, yet we withstood them admirably. In scholarship we were among the best. In athletics we furnished a proper number of men, who were not the worst by any means. In the literary societies we were soon brought into the knowledge of their ways and rushed to the front.

The following year found ten of us enrolled as Sophomores, and Sophomores we were with all of our egotism, vain pride and dignity—for who would not be proud after wearing off the "freshness of the fresh!" The Seniors even paid us obeisance and the Juniors marveled about how honorably we conducted ourselves. The President himself admired us. We were the whole thing to every one, with possibly the exception of the "freshs," who as yet had not forgotten their initiation into "freshmanship." We still maintained

JUNIOR CLASS.

September 29.
First reception Lovelace Hall postponed.

---

our high place in scholarship, with Proctor the star of the Latin class and Mary T. the renowned Greek scholar.

As Juniors we are becoming less egotistic, and see that we are not so much as we were certain we would be when as Sophs we anticipated our future situation. However, our standing in scholarship is none the less high, nor is it less in athletics. On the contrary, we have contributed a captain to the I. R. S. basket-ball team, a good pitcher for the same team and a champion player for the G. L. basket-ball team. The representative from the Palladian Literary Society, who spoke on the evening of George Washington's birthday, was this year chosen from the Junior Class instead of the Senior.

We dare not imagine what our Senior year will be, but we are confident that after feeling blindly around the dark corners of Tacitus, then the room of English and next the black stairways of Logic, we will finally and very triumphantly reach the hall of eternal brightness, where seeing the book of knowledge opened to us we will approach and behold fulfilled all that could be expected of the class of 1907.

Dream of an Amorous Junior.

I dreamed I was in fairy land,
By the side of a crystal stream,
And clasping gently a sweetheart's hand
In the glow of a soft sunbeam.

I heard the sweet songs of the birds,
That perched on the tender bowers,
That mingled with her happy words,
Mid blooming fragrant flowers.

I saw her gaze at the violets blue,
And heard a soft sweet sigh,
Then my heart much fainter grew
When I thought of the by and by.

Then she turned her face towards mine,
With tears in her hazel eyes,
"I'm yours, do not repine,"
Can you picture my glad surprise?

Sophomore Class Prophecy

AS I STAND to-day looking down the dim vista of years my mind dwells upon the members of the Sophomore Class of 1906. Ten years ago I was one of that happy number, but since then what changes have come over us all! What great alterations have taken place in the members and our dear Alma Mater? Many changes for the better, I hope. Yet, "a feeling of sadness comes over me" when I look upon the strange faces before me while I sit in the dear old chapel as in days of "auld lang syne."

Ten years ago all the members of the Sophomore Class were in their accustomed places, happy, young and ambitious. I am sure their lives since leaving the University have brought no reproach upon their class-mates. When here together we were as gay and jolly as any class in the old school, and I recall the Campus strolls of four Saturday mornings one of the class had to take for the benefit of his health.(?) But these joys of sweet school days cannot last always, and now things are changed.

First of all I must tell of the career of our president, Mr. Eugene Jackson : After finishing school in 1908, when he, with honor, won the Strickland medal, he went as a missionary to far Japan and there he is spending his life telling the old, old story, which is ever new.

After leaving college we sometimes lose sight of our dearest class-mates and friends, but I have tried very successfully to keep in touch with our former Vice-President, Elta Arnold. "To know her was to love her," at least Mr. Charles Nuckolls thought, and this accounts for their casting their lots together "for better or for worse." To-day they are living in their quiet home of peace in Jackson where Mr. Nuckolls has made quite an enviable reputation as a lawyer.

Mr. Guy C. Hall, one of the best students of our class, after completing his education in the University and finally in Germany, decided that the Fates had not decreed a life of single blessedness for him and sought with success the heart and hand of Eddie Lee Anthony. Mr. Hall is now pastor of one of the largest churches in San Francisco, the beautiful city which has risen "Phoenix like" from the earthquake and fire of 1906.

The very dignified, but always studious Farris Hale, son of our much beloved President, is to-day one of the most prominent physicians in the Bluff City. He has made a specialty of the disease of the Heart, and the one who shares his fortunes and joys and strengthens him with her unfaltering love is our old friend Maria Townsend.

While I, the only remaining member of the class, am——, but my history is too insignificant to relate.

A Word From the Sophomores.

We countless things believe
Are possible to men.
Bright crowns that shine for ages
Earth's lowly ones may win.

A simple faith, a heart
Sincere and will of might,
Equip the soldier brave
On bloodless fields to fight.

In crisis' trying hour,
Effective more by far
These weapons will become
Than arm of famous Thor.

Eternal Love we would
Exalt for martial air ;
'Tis harmony complete
Full sweet as music rare.

Amphion's regal strain
Could not more potent be :
Love casts down prison walls
And sets the captives free.

Whar you see the hens keep scratching
Dar you'll find de bugs most sho'!
When de rooster's wings go flapping
He are apt to raise a crow!
When you see de Sophs come walking,
Hush your fuss child, right away!—
Sense you'll find dare—no use talking!—
Sweetest gals you too will say!

Freshman Class Prophecy.

WAS sitting in a dark retreat, pen and scroll in hand, when suddenly there stood before me a very intelligent looking youth. When I made a motion for him to speak he said, "Prophet, I entreat you to foretell the fate of the Freshman Class of which I am a member." Unrolling my scroll and glancing down the line of red letter events, I came to that of the Freshman Class of 1906. I read as follows :

T. C. Chandler will finish his course with high honors and afterwards be a learned Professor of Latin and Greek.

Bessie Klutts will strive to make her college education full and complete ; she will be a bright, studious pupil, and as a reward for this she will receive a "Temple."

"Pidgy" Richards will be president of an institution that will undertake to teach young men the correct and graceful mode of walking.

H. H. Edenton, disregarding the advice of the teachers, will continue to study too hard ; he will have to leave school a physical wreck, caused from overstudy.

Eddie Lee Anthony will be a quiet, dignified old maid. She will have a special class in sewing where she will teach her pupils the artistic way of making Kappa Sigma pennants and sofa pillows.

Perry Callahan will be a leader of athletic sports and will be among the first to take up arms in the war against those who oppose games of any kind.

Elizabeth Simmons will continue to go to the S. B. U. trying in vain to get an education. In 1920 she will become discouraged and leave the S. B. U. to try her luck at preparatory school.

W. E. Whitman will be an orator, distinguished for his eloquence and charming personality. In 1909 he will win the medal in the state oratorical contest.

Alta Milstead will always be a heartless flirt.

Isabel Gray will graduate with honors and then she will accept a position as librarian in the S. B. U.

With heroic deeds and attractive mien B. G. Moody will win the admiration of all the young ladies. But to the sorrow of the fair sex he will retire to his bachelor apartments where he will live a secluded life meditating upon the mysteries of the "Æneid."

Fannie Fitzgerald will be known for her kind deeds; she will spend her life as a foreign missionary to China.

Verda Moore will be the prima donna of the twentieth century. She will not have only a fine voice but will compose her own songs. The title of her most popular song will be, "Don't Let Your Studies Interfere With Your College Education."

D. L. Sharp will be a fair illustration of "Violent delights have violent ends." In his ecstasy over passing an English I examination he will overtax his mind with joy and for a time lose his reason. When he recovers he will have a gloomy, melancholy disposition.

Orrena Height will be a young lady of strong will and determination. Her highest ambition will be realized when she becomes Dean of Lovelace Hall.

H. G. Ryals will be a successful lawyer. He will defend numerous cases, never losing one.

CLASS PROPHECY.

October 16.

Jameson petitions faculty that he be permitted to discontinue the study of French.

We Freshmen.

Our class is true, our hopes are great,
Our purpose high and good ;
We like to toil, but shirking hate,
As loyal Freshmen should.

Our wealth the Senior values high
Because no more can he
With face aglow look toward the sky
And dream what is to be.

Pursuing, not possessing fame
Is where the pleasures lie ;
We Freshmen then should praise our name
And never breathe a sigh.

But even in our happy state
We worry, toil and pray,
Because the college needs our aid
And duty calls to-day.

In college sports we take a part
In merry-making, too,
Because fun lightens human hearts
As nothing else can do.

We love our friends—a mighty host,
We love each other, too,
But yet we love our college most
Because we know 'tis due.

But love can always best be shown
By deed and not by word,
Because when idle words have flown
Our deeds can still be heard.

We Freshmen then should scatter deeds
And raise our standard high
That others seeing our good deeds
Our school will glorify.

To Our Alumni.

It is the aim of the Alumni Association to have a homecoming reunion in June that will make happy and warm the hearts of all the members who participate.

The local alumni, the faculty, trustees, and all the friends of the University residing in Jackson, will cordially welcome the former students, whose love for their Alma Mater is sufficient to draw them back home to her this year.

In addition to the pleasure which the commencement exercises will afford, the Alumni Association will enjoy a great banquet where all of us can come together, review the associations of our schooldays listen to words of encouragement and cheer, and grow pensive with the sweet memories of youthful joys.

Our dear old school is keeping step with the inspiring strains of the "March of Progress," and each year adds to her fame and renown. Her faculty is improving the scholarship, and the equipment in building facilities and endowment is increasing rapidly—the efforts of President Dr. Hale having already added thousands of dollars this year. Therefore we can face the future with the happy thought that greater things are in store for the grand old school.

Let us then be mindful of her, and let each of the old students who reads this article, decide that he will be with us in June.

To you all we extend a cordial invitation, and we will give you a royal welcome.

ON THE whole, the results of the statistics were very gratifying, especially as there was little evidence on the part of the various organizations combining to elect any one man to any of the various positions. The only thing that could be desired would be more exact answers to the various questions.

The average student is 20 years, 3 months, 20 days, 4 hours and 3 seconds old. He weighs 153½ pounds; is 6 feet 6 inches in height; and his expenses amount to $375.22 per year.

Some Paragraphs on Athletics.

I. B. TIGRETT.

Alma Mater except through the monthly magazine and the daily press.

The question of athletics has once more been presented to the S. B. U. constituency as a subject for debate. I have read some vigorous discussions pro and con in the 1905-1906 Eatonian, and I have had occasion to deplore the spirit displayed on both sides. Here as elsewhere there is room for sincerity on each side, and neither can afford to lapse into the holier-than-thou strain. It is not my wish to add fuel to a controversy; I simply wish to set forth the point of view of an alumnus who rarely hears of his

I should confess that, perhaps, I have taken seriously enough the "higher plane" arguments. College Athletics are to me a matter of sentiment rather than a matter of reason. We all agree that it is highly desirable for the alumnus to be strongly attached to his Alma Mater: and when I recall the reminiscential conversations I have engaged in or have overheard among college men, I feel convinced that athletics must ever remain the strongest bond between the student and his college. I have noticed that whenever several collegians are thrown together by chance, their talk is chiefly about athletics.

Standing one day in the Twelfth Street Station in Chicago, I witnessed the unexpected reunion of four Wisconsin classmates. After the exchange of greetings the first sentence was, "Boys, didn't we have tough luck in the Chicago game?" Six months had elapsed since the game referred to, and doubtless some very important events had since occurred in the University of Wisconsin. But these men thought first of the all-important football game upon which rested the championship of the West. And last Christmas when I was talking to Will Klutts, an excellent member of the Class of 1901, who had been in Indiana for some months, I noticed that his first question concerning the University was, "How did the football team come out this season?"

This is not to be distorted into a glorification of the merely physical. It is in no sense a disparagement of scholarship. One is not to think that these alumni trained for or attended athletic contests at the expense of their class work. Without regarding it as discreditable, we should note the fact—I really think it is a fact—that athletics have first place in the average graduate's memories of his college days.

So, not concerning myself very much about the "gambling" argument or the "waste of time" argument, I have been exceedingly glad to hear that our boys have made this year an earnest effort to organize and maintain athletic teams. Isaac Tigrett and I rarely talk an hour without reviewing some of the games of '97 and '98; I think it will give the students of 1906 equal pleasure to revive and fight over this year's games when they chance to meet in the after years.

The fact that the teams have not had pennant-winning percentages does not depress me at all. The great thing is to have teams and to play games fairly and manfully; whether we win or lose is a secondary consideration. When I read this spring that the baseball team had been drubbed in a double-header by S. P. U., I could feel no keen disappointment. On the other hand, I rejoiced to know that the boys of my college were in the field and contending pluckily. Nothing I have heard of the University in recent days has pleased me so much as the assurance that only bona fide students have played on our teams this year. In former years much of my pleasure in our achievements has vanished when I realized that we had allowed our desire to win to run away with our consciences. It will be the sacred duty of next year's student body to maintain the high standard set this year. Let us always be able to deny vigorously—and truthfully—the insinuation that there are “ringers” on our team.

It is pleasant to praise a man who is not working for praise. S. B. U. athletics have encountered unusual difficulties and uncompromising opposition; but for the interest, the resourcefulness, and the taet of one alumnus, we should long ago have fallen into desuetude. That alumnus is Isaac B. Tigrett, and as the spokesman of S. B. U. students, past and present, I thank him for the great service he has so unselfishly rendered his Alma Mater.

FOOT BALL HISTORY.

1906.

It is written somewhere to the effect that forgetting those things that are past we should look with steadfastness into the future. He was considered a wise man who gave utterance to this statement, and we hope to be able to follow to some extent his advice. But before drawing the veil of oblivion over this little piece of college history, we wish to state once more, clearly and distinctly, the just reasons and causes why our record on the gridiron was not otherwise than that which is recorded against us, and incidentally to throw a few bouquets of withered forget-me-nots to those fierce, grim, hair-disheveled, sweater-torn warriors on the following page.

They were a hard working set of players, full of grit and determination, and possessed of no little brawn and fancy colored sweaters; but one could not help but notice that at critical points in a game their efforts seemed sadly misdirected and often it appeared that they had hopelessly confused the game of football with some other sport of their younger days.

Football practice began on Oct. 15, with three candidates who had "seen some service," although they would never mention the teams they encountered, and some twelve or fifteen others who were as green in reference to gridiron affairs as the moss that covered the "old oaken bucket." However, they were a fairly capable crowd, and as before remarked, possessed of great energy; and there is little telling what memorable things they might have accomplished, had it not been for that tendency to confuse the game of Football with the game of "Cow Pen" (as Prof. Burke would say).

In the first games this desire to stay in the center of the field was very evident. Members of the opposing team sometimes took the ball and went across the goal line, but they always went unaccompanied by any of our players, who, true to their instinct, kept in the middle of the ring.

The Thanksgiving game, however, was depended upon to wipe away any stain upon the escutcheon of these warriors, and cover them all with glory. The earlier erroneous ideas of the game had been corrected; they were in fine shape and overflowing with confidence. The manager and captain of the team figured out the night before the large score they would most surely make, had already counted the gate receipts, and then it was that that very capricious and fickle young lady, Misfortune, shook us and the game was cancelled by the opposing team. Thus the dreams of football glory for these sturdy defenders of the Blue and Gold were swept away by a single little telegram.

The manager and captain, broken in spirit and weary in body, folded up their suits, placed their football shoes gently in the corner of the room, took out of their pocketbooks two little pieces of parchment on which the words: "We hold a note on you," etc., might be observed, gazed at this awhile and gently sighed.

The Thralldom of Custom.

TIME was when there stood an old fortress, against which the advancing principles of reform were hurled in vain; and he who dared scale its height found every step enshrouded in mystery and uncertainty. If perchance he should succeed to find some way by which to shatter any portion of the walls of this fortification, he himself immediately became penniless, homeless and nameless. Even in these days of freedom, enlightenment and conquest along all lines, it isn't safe to venture too near this old fortress, unless one is thoroughly impervious to all missiles of wrath, vengeance and envy. But it is doubtless necessary that we introduce this formidable enemy to all investigating minds and progressive spirits; for want of a better name, we call it "Custom."

The world at large is unwilling to accept theories and practices contrary to prevailing beliefs, and when some one dares to suggest or contend for something not found in custom's time-worn catalogue, he is at once crowned with a crown of invectives and nailed upon the cross of prejudice, to wait for later generations to discover him a hero. It is a difficult task to convince the people of any age that there can be anything wrong or imperfect in the good old ways established by their forefathers. They say that what has stood so many years must be right, and to refuse to endure longer, to reject or doubt this, is to disrespect the memory of their ancestors. It is for these reasons, all reforms advance so slowly and reformers so often doomed to become martyrs to the principle they believe to be true. If all men had been satisfied with their surroundings and content to sleep in the tombs of their ancestors, progress would have been impossible, and modern civilization a thing unknown. But thanks to the God who shapes our destinies, such has not been the case. Heroes and martyrs have dared to break through the walls of this dreary fortress and have often left her inmates wailing in despair over their lost possessions.

It is in the crisis of a nation's life, that some Prometheus, seeing his country's needs, snatches the fire from the chariot wheels of the god of progress, and with its flame, quickens the deadened pulse of sleeping humanity; and like Prometheus, he must be bound to the rocks of custom while the vultures of prejudice and hatred prey upon his vitals, because he advanced principles in advance of his age, or dared assert a greatness which could not be concealed; such a character not only demands, but receives recognition to-day at our hands, and portrays a greatness and a dignity that is admirable, even though it be connected with a littleness and meanness that is deplored and despised.

On a small island of the South Atlantic is shut up a remarkable prisoner, wearing himself out there in a feeble mixture of peevishness and jealousy, solaced by no great thought and no heroic spirit; killing and consuming himself by the intense littleness into which he has shrunk. And this is the great Conqueror of the modern world, the man whose name is great among the greatest names; a man remarkable for the stupendous powers of his understanding and the more stupendous and imperial leadership of his will. But he is not alone; the immortal Kepler, piloting science into the skies, and comprehending the vastness of the heavens, for the first time, in the fixed embrace of a new thought, not only proves the magnificence of the man as a ruin, when you discover the strange ferment of irritability and superstition wild, in the midst of which his great thoughts are brewed and his mighty life dissolved.

So, also, Bacon, living in an element of cunning, servility, ingratitude, and dying under the shame of a convict, is yet able to dignify disgrace by the stupendous majesty of his genius, and commands the reverence of the world as one of its benefactors. Probably no one of mankind has raised himself to a higher pitch of remorse by the superlative attributes of genius displayed in his writings, than the great English dramatist, flowering out, nevertheless, into such eminence of glory, on a compost of fustian, buffoonery, and other vile stuff, which he so magnificently covers with splendors and irradiates with beauty that the hawkings of contemporaries are lost in the vehemence of the praise of to-day. And so we shall find, almost universally, that the greatness of the world's great men, is proved by the fact that they tower above the cavil and weakness and shame, amid which they wrought, and out of which as solitary pillars they rise. History abounds in illustrations. Let us notice some of the great movements in religion, in politics and in literature.

Christ, they crucified, and his followers they cast into prison and beat with stripes, because they dared turn from formal ritualism to a religion that throbbed with new life. At the close of the fifteenth century, the power of the Pope was at its height, and Catholicism, comparatively speaking, reigned supreme. The masses lived in ignorance, and wilfully accepted the shameful doctrines preached to them—but when by the aid of the printing-press, the publication of the Bible was made possible, the authority of the Roman Church began to be doubted and its immorality looked upon with suspicion. At last, Luther dared to nail his ninety-three theses to the door of the Church at Wittenberg and invited the world to examine them, and thus demonstrated the fact that thinking men need no longer bow in servile obedience to the dictates of a corrupt and opprobrious Pope.

The burning of the papal bull, issued in denunciation of these principles, signified that this Pope was no longer protected by a false respect, and reverence for his immaculate person. The iconoclast of religious custom had arisen—the nadir of religious darkness had been reached, and through three hundred years of darkness and despair the Protestants waded through blood and persecution towards the full morning light of religious freedom which dawned at the birth of the American Republic.

In one of our darkest periods of English History, the Magna Charta was born. The midnight gloom of apprehension had so enveloped the people that almost all their rights and liberties had been taken away by the tyrannical King John; but when the great Charter was wrested from him, the distant dawn of political freedom was seen. This, the most important concession ever wrung from a tyrannical sovereign by a freedom-loving people, was the basis of constitutional liberty to the English speaking race.

We trace oppression's cruel sway across the broad Atlantic to fair America, where the struggling colonists are contending against the despotic rule of a prejudiced Parliament. With a boldness that dazed the world, these lovers of freedom threw off the oppressor's yoke and stood forth a "free and independent nation." Then it was that liberty, Archangel of Nations, appeared and "with her feet upon the cloud, and her forehead amongst the stars," with her flaming sword in hand, and with her great wings stretched into the open azure, gave to the world the first example of a genuine republic. The light from the flame of liberty flashed back across the Atlantic and encouraged the poverty-stricken, tax-burdened Commons of France in their mighty struggle against a reign of corruption and ruin. Truly this was the midnight of political prospects in France. An enraged people, driven to desperation by heartless oppression, marched through the streets of Paris to destroy the Bastille, which was to them the emblem of despotism. As its stones fell, one after another, they tolled the death knell of royal tyranny, not only in France, but throughout the world.

Then there is the national movement in literary life. About the beginning of the fourteenth century, in the midnight of the intellectual and literary world, the Italian Renaissance began. The first glimmering light of this great movement was the Florentine poet—Dante. Again we are in the throes of a mighty struggle, and the revival led by Petrarch and Erasmus, marks the line between the middle ages and the modern times intellectually. It made the Reformation possible and probable. It awakened an interest in classical learning, and by so doing drove superstition and ignorance before it. But the process was slow, the martyrs were many; the labored march towards Learning's dawn was through Egyptian darkness. Chaucer, the "Father of English Poetry," was the morning star of this dawning period, and then the russet-clad Goddess of Morn appeared and ushered into being that noble Trimmvirate of English Literature—Shakespeare, Spenser and Bacon.

We can see and judge the past, but we are not able to lift the future's sable shroud and determine where the spirit of progress will end. It has been a long and great struggle, a splendid campaign, a race, a contest for interests and honors of the highest character and the most enduring importance. Happy the hero, who has dared to think and express his thoughts! How pleasing to him who has broken the thralldom of custom, and has run a glorious race, to survey from the lofty summit of his eternal fame, the cumulative results of an active originality, developed in the light of eternity! How transporting to contemplate the proximate and the remote, the direct and the indirect beatific fruits of his labors, reflected from the bright countenances of enraptured myriads, beaming with grateful emotion to him as the honored instrument of having inducted them into those paths which led into the fruition of riches, honors and pleasures, boundless as the Universe and enduring as the Ages of Eternity.

A Sunset Reverie.

Did you ever sit at evening, when the sun was growing low,
And watch it drape the mountains in a farewell misty glow,
When the western firelights flicker and the embers glow so bright,
Bidding farewell to the day-time and good morning to the night?
Then it is the azure heavens cast away their suit of blue,
And assume their evening vesture of a richly golden hue;
All the colors of Dame Nature form a mellow vesper light,
And with the dazzling of the daytime blends the grandeur of the night.
See the heavens rich emblazoned with that brilliant golden train,
Silken sunbeams fast departing, ne'er to kiss the scene again:
For the candle of the heavens, having seen his labors o'er
In the place that he is leaving, goes to bless some other shore.
And at this time of evening—at the closing of the day—
Scenes are taking place on earth which to investigate will pay.
Then do lovers sit in rapture underneath the stately trees,
And whisper words so softly they are buoyed on the breeze;
And, as the eve steals gently on and mingles with the night,
They heave no sigh for parting day, they care not for the light:
They have no need for such a thing. In fact, they'd rather not
That light should force unwelcome way and mingle with their lot.
O, the touching conversation—very "touching" I'll be bound—
Of a happy, happy couple when no listener's around.
Harps are stricken by the angels but their strings give back no sound
Like the beating hearts of lover's when no listener's around.
Lovers mostly are like dew drops gently sparkling in the sun:
Simply blow your breath upon them and they mingle into one.
You may sing of golden altars and of oriental shrines,
Of the wealth beneath the covert where the stately monarch dines,
Of the lavishment of splendor known to every age and clime—
Truly, all of these are dazzling, but the sunset is sublime.
All the arts, both past and present, could not paint a picture true
Of the grandeur of the sunset and the splendor of the dew.
Once I sat upon the wayside with a close observing eye,

And in the stillness of the evening watched the people passing by,
Beauty, grandeur, wealth and plenty, base grotesqueness, right and wrong,
All were lurking in the faces of the never ceasing throng,
Vice and virtue were companions, youth and age walked arm in arm;
All were there, old gray-haired culprits, and the youth that knew no harm,
Passed a child, the shrine of virtue, little creature of the skies,
Then a sullen, roving robber—there was murder in his eyes,
'Twas the cavalcade of life that passed before me on that day;
I looked and sighed and prayed a prayer and slowly turned away,
In the calmness of the evening comes a whisper to my soul,
And it whispers that this earthly stay is not its final goal;
As the sun retires at eventide and rises with the morn,
So the soul that quits this temple to a better life is born,
For the God that makes the sun to set and then to rise again,
Will be no less propitious to departing souls of men,
'Tis a song forever ancient, 'tis a song forever new,
'Tis a song for all the ages, 'tis a song forever true:
When our stay on earth is ended, and we've trod life's journey through,
There 's a heavenly home awaiting, a home for me, a home for you.

Education.

SCHOOLS exist for education, and that school is best that educates best, rather than that which has the largest number of students, the greatest endowment or the biggest buildings. President Garfield said the best school was a log with the student sitting on one end and Mark Hopkins on the other. I think that Roman soldier who was chained to the Apostle Paul had the best opportunity for education that ever a man had. The trouble is there are not enough Pauls and Hopkinses to go round. We are bound to gather students in groups. Even were there enough of the finest teachers to go round, the average student lacks much of being able to bear the whole expense of supporting a teacher. Hence we must have schools, so that the largest number may get the best teaching at the lowest cost; and that the arrangement may be permanent, the school ought not to perish when a given teacher passes away.

What is an education? It is not learning something you did not before, but it is becoming something different from what you were before. It is not information that educates, but training. Not knowledge but thinking develops the man. Dr. Broadus defined an educated man as one who could put his mind on any subject he chose and hold it there at will. Just as a man is physically educated when he can control accurately all his physical nature, compelling his body to do, to the limit of its strength, whatever a body can be made to do; so a man is educated mentally who can control all his mental faculties. While education does increase strength, its main function is to remove awkwardness and to make service easy.

To be educated a man must learn to think. To cram facts into the memory is not education. Facts are useful as material for education, but the education is in the man, while the facts are outside. To learn to think clearly, accurately, easily, rapidly and strongly—this is to be educated.

Greek and Latin and Mathematics are not to be learned simply that we may know these branches and be able to pass an examination in them. They are to be learned for the education which studying them brings, and which cannot be so well attained in any other way. Not that we may know about the dative case in Greek, or the subjunctive mood in Latin, or the asymptotes in Mathematics, but that we may be able to think rightly, and to express our thoughts clearly and strongly, do we pursue these studies. Education is to give a man more sense and better sense than he had before. It is to increase his power and his efficiency for service.

The highest education comes from the study of the highest things. No man is rightly educated till he has learned of God, or, as the Prophet puts it, till he has been "taught of God". "The proper study of mankind is man," says Pope, but that is true only when we regard man as the text book and God as the lesson. The highest wisdom is to know God—that is life everlasting.

T. T. EATON.

Some Horatian Advice.

BOOK I, ODE IX.

Soracte stands with snow-crowned head
Above the frozen river,
While the bending trees with branches bare
In the wintry breezes shiver.

The blazing hearth with logs piled high
Will make a cheerful room
And Sabine old and vintage rare
Dispel the winter's gloom.

What matter if the winds without
Are raging furiously?
The gods will quiet the elements
And still the troubled sea.

The silver poplars soon shall cease
Their swaying in the storm;
The mountain ash-tree, grey and gaunt,
Is but a trembling form.

Why question if tomorrow's sun
Will bring you loss or gain?
For fortune gives, with each new day,
Its share of joy and pain.

Youth's days are full of the joys of life,
Of love, and laughter, and song;
Scorn not its pleasure while 'tis here
For old age comes ere long.

—DRU HELEN CROOK, '04.

Via Feminae.

LADYS, this is the unhappiest hour of all my life. For days I have looked forward to this drive with the glorious thought that it would mark the greatest event that would ever grace my unworthy existence—sorrows, the ups and downs of life with me. You have seemed to—the promise of the sweetest girl in the world to share the joys and enjoy my company; with your woman's intuition, you can not but have divined how totally my heart is yours—and I thought—I thought that I could discern just a little of the love light in your eyes from day to day—”

“Oh, Walter,” she broke in upon this impassioned flood of amorous oratory: “Our friendship thus far has been so ideal—so unbroken by anything that smacks of material things. I felt like we could go on forever just the way we have, and I'm so sorry that you have said what you have.”

And this in spite of the fact that she had boasted a few days before that she could keep any man from proposing to her if she wanted to, and moreover her face that very moment was a maze of blushes and a picture of happiness.

Walter glanced at the face and refused to believe that his ears had heard aright. He tried to coax away the verdict, but oratory and love alike seemed wasted, and she persisted in saying that she wanted to be only a friend, nothing but a friend, and yet the only friend, or at least the best of all.

The high-bred mare and stylish trap looked almost awkward, so slow a pace had circumstances and the driver compelled them to assume. They were speeding—no only crawling along a cosy road among the trees. The sun was sinking slowly to the west—all earth was silent as if to catch the low toned words of happiness, followed by a murmur of controversy, which the reader, like Dame Nature, has eavesdropped at their anti-climax. Surely Walter could not have chosen a more propitious time than this to ask the fateful question—a time when earth, sky and humanity seemed to combine to aid his suit—and yet the very ruffles of her dress seemed lined with controversy and the utmost powers of his not unskillful tongue had been wasted, it seemed, upon the desert air. With one grand finale of passion, Walter seemed to give it up.

“That's what you call Platonic friendship, I suppose. (Sarcasmically.) I wonder if old Plato did really start that crazy idea? I always thought him a very sensible fellow. We read his apology (Walter was just out of college and rather proud of his B.A.) and we never could understand it, even when the professor translated it for us. But if he was guilty of starting all this thing that is named after him, he ought to have brought his shade back to earth and keep on apologizing through the centuries. To—Hades with Plato and his foolishness——” and Walter made a savage lunge with the whip, as if to assist the shade of the ancient philosopher back to Tartarus.

The thoroughbred was so startled by the unwonted touch of the whip that she bounded forward roughly, but as she felt the restraining touch of the reins, compromised with a lively trot—the first in many minutes. There was silence in the trap for the space of half a minute, although there were intelligent and interested representatives of both sexes seated therein.

Gladys was busy contemplating the beauty of the trees and flowers, although a hardly repressed smile, accompanied by a twinkle in the eye, told that she was enjoying the situation to the fullest. Walter’s brow was clouded with intense vexation and disappointment for a moment, and then gradually began to clear up, a bright idea evidently having lodged on the interior. A signal was sent ahead to the wise little animal to slacken her pace. Gladys settled herself more securely as if to brace for the coming conflict—it was apparent that the battle was going to be renewed or that overtures for peace were in process of formation.

Walter had been the aggressive factor in forcing the cessation of hostilities and was the first to break the ominous truce. To the surprise of his companion and to her complete discomfiture, his first remark was entirely foreign to the subject with which the debate had closed for a recess.

“Do you see that old tree there? I always will have a sort of superstitious love for that dear old triumph of nature.”

“Why so?” with evident interest.

“Do you remember Mabel Haynes? She and I were driving along this road once, and we got out and cut our names, like children, on the tree. There they are now; do you see them? You know my mother always says that Mabel and I were made for each other, and sometimes I think she is right. Mabel is such a charming girl, and they say she can cook and keep house like a humanized angel. I am going to drop around to see her tomorrow night, by the way, and talk over old times. I half believe I could fall in love with her still.”

Looking over in the other side of the buggy, the occupied portion of which was not a feather’s breadth away, Walter discovered a pair of pouting lips, backed up by a similar number of flashing eyes.

"I don't see why you want to talk that way for. You know I never could endure her."

"Yes," with modest unconcern, "I have noticed that you hardly ever like any girl for whom I express a fondness. Strange how our tastes differ, isn't it?"

"You conceited thing—too egotistic to live," she flashed back and subsided.

"Sense me—you took it all out of me at one swoop just a while ago. Oh, say, have you met that girl from Chicago, who is visiting Grace Foster? Let me tell you, she's a beauty. Oh, now I think of it, I must tell you all about it. I met her at the Williams's reception the other night, and on my side it was a case almost of love at first sight. Things began to slow a little about ten o'clock and we strolled out in the conservatory. There, well never mind. I think I shall take her to the dance at White's tomorrow night. I promised to call, too, probably about Thursday night."

"What is your new found love like anyway?"

"Oh, she's a dream. She has the most beautiful blue eyes—you know I always preferred blue eyes, anyway—and she looks up at a fellow in such a girlish, trusting sort of way that the man who didn't fall in love with her is an idiot. They say she has lots of money too, but of course a fellow in love doesn't think about that part of the matter. We are going to show her a good time while she is here, and I fancy, without being conceited, that I have the first call. Just to think of it—and three entertainments coming next week too—I ought to be a happy man, and I am. Say, look here, I pressed this at home and placed it in my pocketbook for a remembrance. It is the flower that Ethel gave me the other night in the conservatory."

"Why should all this rot interest me," she flashed. "What do I care about Ethel from Chicago or from Halifax?"

"You are my Platonic friend, and I thought you would be interested in anything that concerns me. I was conceited enough to think that you did have a little spark of interest left, anyway. I beg pardon and shall not intrude again. I might mention, however, that I am going around to see Ethel tonight."

"Say, Walter,"—softly—"are you really in love with the girl from Chicago?"

"Why shouldn't I be? She is far better looking than any girl who graces or disgraces the streets of Williamstown. She sings and plays, and has all the accomplishments named in the latest book of etiquette. Compared with the girls here she is as the New York Nationals to the Hillville Sluggers. She is by far the best catch that has been here recently, and they say that her heart is entirely unoccupied unless——” and he hummed a strain from “Lo, the Conquering Hero Comes”.

By this time the thoroughbred had grown tired of the snail-like pace to which she had been subjected, and had struck up a brisk trot which had brought the entire equipage to a stately country home, whose very aspect told of refinement and hospitality within. With the confidence born of frequent visits, Walter hitched his mare and strolled down the walk with Gladys into the parlor.

“Well, if I am going to make that date with Ethel, I must hurry to a telephone, so I suppose it is time for me to say adieu.”

“Wait, Walter.”

“Well?”

“Oh, nothing, only I have some violets here for you—wait a minute.” As she pinned them on with a pout, “Don’t give them to Ethel.”

He shook hands as usual, and started for the door.

“Say, Walter.”

“Well?”

“Are you so very much in love with Ethel?”

“Well I could hardly change front so rapidly with an avowal I made not over an hour ago, but it wouldn’t be very hard for me to fall in. Then besides, you know, she has already half told me that she is in love with me, and she is such a charming girl that it would not take me more than three or four visits to complete the job.”

“Say, I’d rather you wouldn’t go to see her.”

“Why? You are my Platonic friend and are supposed to share all my triumphs and defeats on the field of Eros. Why should you object?”

“Because I don’t like her.”

“But you haven’t even met her. You’ll have to find some other reason.”

“Well, it’s because—you are the most conceited man in the world, but I love you—oh, Walter, don’t.”

A few moments later, after emerging from retirement: “Walter, was all that you insinuated about the conservatory really true?”

“Not a word, sweetheart. Just said it for fun.”

“You mean thing!”

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write this NOW.

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.65)
NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Twenty-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road thus overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

MEAD CYCLE COMPANY, Dept. "JL" CHICAGO, ILL.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "C," also rim strip "D" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.
